It is an awesome way to keep your skin soft and delicate. In any case, they are strong which implies they aren't muddled and you can keep them in your bag everywhere when you travel. A lotion bar would have the capacity to protect your skin, however the warmth of your skin is sufficiently only to marginally liquefy the bar as you rub it between your hands or over your skin.

What people say about this book

Maine-iac, "Great gift items you can make easily. The book is about a paragraph of info and 10 recipes. Not many tips in the book. One tip that isn't but should be, melt your beeswax first. The first batch I dumped everything in together and afterwards realized that the beeswax didn't quite melt completely. You may want to get a double boiler from a second hand store so you don't have to worry about lotion residue on your food. I've tried two different recipes. The coconut oil lotion bar and the lavender lotion bar - however, I scented them both with coconut essential oil. The shea butter has a fairly strong scent on its own and is similar in consistency to coconut oil when solid. Cocoa butter is hard (like a soap bar) and came shaped similar to an over-sized stick of butter. I scored the measurement edges and "shaved" it with a large knife to get shavings to melt. I didn't use a lot of essential oil... maybe 15 drops per batch. The silicone molds need to be set on a wire rack or tray before you fill them or you cannot move them without spilling the contents. These tips would have been useful to include in the book, but for time and investment, I'm happy overall. You don't have to fill the molds to the top. I used the freezer method to set them. Took 45 minutes to an hour start to finish. Big hit at work - made a bunch to give as gifts. I bought the molds and most of the ingredients on Amazon."

J. Singleton, "Great recipes. First, the book was free to download - love that! Gave me some great ideas on ingredients to try. If you haven't tried making lotion bars, it's super easy and fast. Book recommends double boiler but I've used a mason jar with lid in pan of water then use a hot pad to pick it up and shake to mix. No mess!"

Dawn Evans, "This would help. Needs a brief description of what issues each bar will help. For Example: eczema, dry skin, moisturizing, aging skin. Etc."

TAW229, "Good!. There are some good recipes in this book. They aren't for big batches so you have to double, triple or whatever to get the amount of bars you want. I've made one recipe so far and thought my bars were a bit too soft so I remelted and added more beeswax which did the trick. I am looking forward to making other recipes."

Alannah MacLiam, "Short and sweet. I liked how easy this was to read. Straight to the point and full of recipes. I can not wait to try these out."

Veronica, "I love this book !!!!!. This book helped me a lot to start doing my soaps , the recipes are so clear and easy to follow, I'll buy it again, Veronica"

KD-D, "Great little book with lots of recipes for lotion bars. Great little book with lots of recipes for lotion bars. I love the variety of recipes, and the attention to detail. The recipes are easy to follow, and laid out in an easy to understand manner. I would recommend "10 Easy Homemade Organic Lotion Bars" by Diann Bright."

Melinda A. Lockwood, "Easy read. This is an easy read packed full of nice looking recipes! I look forward to trying several of her recipes!"

Mitchell, "Five Stars. Nice book"

Jelly, "Loved This Book. Loved the recipes in this book. Can't stop as I'm off to try some of these delicious lotion bar recipes!"
